One Child to Love

A young woman had been seeing a psychiatrist. The doctor had established that she was a wife and mother of three children, and he asked, “Which of your three children do you love the most?” She answered instantly, “I love all three of my children the same.” He paused. The answer was almost too quick, too glib. He decided to probe a bit. “Come now, you love all three of your children the same?” “Yes, that’s right,” she said. “I love all of them the same.” He said, “Come off it now! It is psychologically impossible for anyone to regard any three human beings the same. If you’re not willing to level with me, we’ll have to terminate this session.”

With this the young woman broke down, cried a bit, and said, “All right. I do not love all three of my children the same. When one of my three children is sick, I love that child more. When one of my children is confused, I love that child more. And when one of my children is bad—I don’t mean naughty, I mean really bad—I love that child more.” Then she added, “Except for those exceptions I do love all three of my children about the same.”

The Christian faith represents a God who knows and loves you just as He knows and loves other human beings on this planet—but with this addition: when you are sick or hurting or lost or confused or in pain or deprived—He loves you even more.

So, we personalize the message that “God loves each one of us as if there were only one of us to love.”

A Child's View of Grandmas and Grandpas

A grandmother is a lady who has no children of her own, so she likes other people's children. A grandfather is a man grandmother. He likes to go on walks with kids and they talk about fishing and things like that.

Grandmas don't have to do anything except be there. They're old, so they shouldn't play hard or run. They let us ride the "pretend horse" at K-mart and have plenty of coins ready. They take us on slow walks and always stop for things like caterpillars and pretty leaves. They never, ever say, "Hurry up."

Usually they are fat, but not too fat to tie kids shoes. They wear glasses and funny underwear.

They don't have to be smart, only answer questions like, "Why dogs hate cats?" and "How come God isn't married?" They don't talk baby talk like visitors do because it's hard to understand.

Everybody should try to have one, because grandmas and grandpas are the only grown ups who have got time.

“M”

A teacher had just given her second-grade class a lesson on magnets. Now came the question session, and she asked a little boy, "My name starts with an 'M' and I pick up things. What am I?" The boy replied instantly, "A Mother."
